This is a passage from the 2013 novel As the River Runs by Western Australian writer Stephen Scourfield.

The snake moves like mercury poured on the ferociously red gravel. It grips the back of the lizard’s neck and syringes venom in calculated overdoses. Scuffed arcs either side show where the blue-tongue has put up its fight, but now it and the two-metre king brown are absorbed only by death. The lizard froths at the mouth, cells saturated by poison, but obstinate survival instincts force its tough little body and crazed mind to resist. Every now and then its tail arcs, signalling both insolence and complete hopelessness.

‘She can take some poison. I’d’a been well dead by now,’ breathes Vincent Yimi, hanging back, mesmerised by the spectacle. The sun is silver on its ringlet body.

‘Reckon,’ replies Dylan Ward.

‘Don’t you get too close,’ says Vincent, watching uncomfortably as the young bloke crams in so that he can see the diamond in the snake’s eyes.

‘She’s too busy to worry about me.’

Dylan had been watching, almost motionless, for minutes when Vincent noticed him and wandered up.

‘I don’t like them snakes. Should leave ‘em well alone,’ he murmurs, scuffing the red Australian dirt with his boots, adjusting the silver Elvis sunglasses he found on a street years ago and that are now his trademark. They cover yellowed eyes crusted with glaucoma. His black skin, so deep and dark that it sucks in the sunlight and leaves his face almost featureless, is glistening with an oily, nervous sweat. Uncle Vincent Yimi. ‘You don’t want snakes of no sorts around you.’

The lizard’s stumpy legs suddenly run in the air, and the king brown’s head picks up the rhythm and squirts in more lethal sap. Pseudechis Australia doing its thing. Tiliqua multifasciata – the central blue-tongued skink – finally getting the message.

‘You know about us Aborigines’ Dreamtime snakes?’ The rainbow serpent that made the universe, and another one that made the rivers, pools and springs. Vincent changing the subject. ‘Dreamtime snake is like our mother, the earth. The story of this place.’
Question 2

(10 marks)

Analyse how the snake is created to reveal an idea in Text 2.

What a wonderful time it is for the scammer, the conniver, and the cheat: the underage drinkers who flash fake I.D.s, the parents who use a phony address so that their child can attend a more desirable school, the customers with eleven items who stand in the express lane. The latest group to bend the law is pet owners.

Take a look around. See the St Bernard slobbering over the spring onions at the supermarket? Isn’t that a Rottweiler sitting third row, mezzanine, at the Concert Hall? As you will have observed, an increasing number of your neighbours have been keeping company with their pets in human-only establishments, cohabiting with them in animal-unfriendly apartment buildings and dormitories, and taking them (free!) onto aeroplanes — simply by claiming that the creatures are their licensed companion animals and are necessary to their mental well-being. No government agency keeps track of such figures, but in 2011 the National Service Animal Registry, a commercial enterprise that sells certificates, vests, and badges for helper animals, signed up twenty-four hundred emotional-support animals. Last year, it registered eleven thousand.

What about the mental well-being of everyone else? One person’s emotional support can be another person’s emotional trauma. Last May, for instance, a woman brought her large service dog, Truffles, on a US Airways flight from Los Angeles to Philadelphia. At thirty-five thousand feet, the dog squatted in the aisle and, according to Chris Law, a passenger who tweeted about the incident, “did what dogs do.” After the second, ahem, instalment, the crew ran out of detergent and paper towels. “Plane is emergency landing cuz ppl are getting sick,” Law tweeted. “Biohazard team needs to board.” The woman and Truffles disembarked, to applause, in Kansas City, and she offered her inconvenienced fellow-passengers Starbucks gift cards.
