CHINESE: SECOND LANGUAGE

GENERAL COURSE

Year 12 syllabus

Acknowledgement of Country

Kaya. The School Curriculum and Standards Authority (the Authority) acknowledges that our offices are on Whadjuk Noongar boodjar and that we deliver our services on the country of many traditional custodians and language groups throughout Western Australia. The Authority acknowledges the traditional custodians throughout Western Australia and their continuing connection to land, waters and community. We offer our respect to Elders past and present.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

This syllabus is effective from 1 January 2023.

Users of this syllabus are responsible for checking its currency.

Syllabuses are formally reviewed by the School Curriculum and Standards Authority on a cyclical basis, typically every five years.

Rationale

The place of the Chinese culture and language in Australia and in the world

China's official language is Modern Standard Chinese, or Putonghua (the common or shared language) in Chinese. The language is also referred to as Hanyu, the spoken language of the Han people, or Zhongwen, the written language of China. In Taiwan it is more usually called Huayu (Hwayu), the spoken language of people of Chinese ethnicity, a term also used in Singapore. A number of dialects remain in active use and both forms of Chinese characters (simplified and full form) are regularly used in the media, in education and in environmental print (advertisements, shop signs). Such diversity highlights the need for recognition of spoken dialects and both writing systems in any Chinese language curriculum. However, the priority in education should be Modern Standard Chinese and simplified characters as the internationally recognised 'official form' of Chinese.

Communities of speakers beyond the geography of 'Greater China', the mainland, Hong Kong and Taiwan, can be found in almost every country of the world. Many of these communities have a long tradition and are well established in parts of South-East Asia, the Pacific coast of Canada and the USA, and in Australia. The history of the Chinese community in Australia extends back to the mid-1800s, and has been characterised by rapid growth in numbers in the last few decades.

The place of the Chinese language in Australian education

Chinese has been taught in Australian schools since the 1950s, and experienced rapid growth in the 1980s as China undertook a policy of 'open door' and economic reform. While Chinese has traditionally been taught as a 'second language' in schools, recently there has been an increasing response to the needs and interests of Australian-born Chinese and overseas-born Chinese speakers residing and attending school in Australia.

Chinese is recognised as an important language for young Australians to have access to during their schooling as Australia progresses towards a future of increased trade and engagement with Asia.

The nature of Chinese language learning

English and Chinese have very different grammatical and vocabulary systems. The Chinese spoken language is characterised by a high number of homophones. These homophones are tone-syllables, which are used to represent more than one morpheme and each of which has its own particular Chinese character. The range of syllables in Chinese, while limited in comparison to English, does include some sounds unfamiliar to English speakers. Learning Chinese requires learning to interact orally, supported by print materials in the Pinyin Romanisation system, and learning to read and write supported by texts and resources in Chinese characters.

Characters are logographs composed of a number of components organised into a particular sequence within a square, parts of which are likely to suggest the sound and meaning of the whole character. The majority of characters are morpheme-syllables – each of which represents a syllable of sound and a unit of meaning. There are 3500 frequently used characters which are learned by native-speaker children in primary school in China. These characters are composed of approximately 500 distinct components which are used with varying degrees of frequency, location and function. An additional characteristic of Chinese writing is the fact that texts in Chinese characters do not display word level spacing and texts may be written vertically and read from right to left down the page.

The character system has undergone significant evolution, standardisation and simplification over time. There are two standard character sets of Chinese character systems: simplified and traditional (full form). Simplified character forms were created by decreasing the number of strokes and simplifying the forms of a sizable proportion of traditional Chinese characters. Simplified Chinese characters are officially used in the People's Republic of China and Singapore, while Traditional Chinese characters are currently used in Hong Kong, Macau, and Republic of China (Taiwan). In recent times the need to create texts in Chinese in digital format has resulted in an international effort to standardise character forms so that computer operating systems internationally can generate and reproduce texts in Chinese in both simplified and traditional characters. In contemporary overseas Chinese media texts are commonly in either simplified or traditional characters, reflecting the diverse histories and preferences of these communities. Consequently some knowledge or awareness of both systems is an advantage, to both Chinese speakers and Chinese learners alike.

Different systems have been developed to reproduce the sounds of the Chinese language using the Roman alphabet to assist learners who are already familiar with the Roman alphabet. Today, the Pinyin system is recognised internationally as the principal means of representing the sounds of Chinese in alphabetic form. It plays an important role in oral language development, and a supplementary role in developing skills in reading and writing. Pinyin assists students to learn and record the sounds of Chinese, to access words via their sounds in bilingual dictionaries; and as an efficient means of text input when creating texts in characters using digital media. It is important to note that Pinyin is limited in its readability, and is considered a tool for learning rather than a valid alternative to written expression in characters.

The diversity of learners of Chinese

Chinese language programs in Australian schools are offered to a range of learners. Many are monolingual English speakers, for whom this represents a first experience of learning a second language. Many others have existing connections with Chinese, either directly as background speakers of Chinese, or as second or third generation Chinese-Australians, or through professional, personal or other forms of cultural connection.

The WACE Chinese courses

In Western Australia, there are four Chinese courses. The courses are differentiated: each focusing on a pathway that will meet the specific language learning needs of a particular group of senior secondary students. Within each of these groups, there are differences in proficiency in using the Chinese language and cultural systems.

The following courses are available:

- Chinese: Second Language ATAR
- Chinese: Second Language General
- Chinese: Background Language ATAR
- Chinese: First Language ATAR.

The Chinese: Second Language General course

This course focuses on students gaining knowledge and an understanding of the culture and language of Chinese -speaking communities.

The Chinese: Second Language General course can connect to the world of work, further study and travel. It also offers opportunities for students to participate in the many sister school and student exchange programs between Western Australia and China. The Chinese: Second Language General course is designed to equip students with the skills needed to function in an increasingly globalised society, a culturally and linguistically diverse local community, and to provide the foundation for life-long language learning.

This course is aimed at students for whom Chinese is a second, or subsequent, language. These students have not been exposed to, or interacted in, the language outside of the language classroom. Students may have no prior knowledge or experience of the Chinese language, or may have studied the Chinese language and culture through classroom teaching in an Australian school, or similar environment, where English is the language of school instruction.

The Chinese language referred to in the Chinese: Second Language General course is Modern Standard Chinese, also known as Mandarin. Simplified characters are used in writing.

For information on the Chinese: Second Language ATAR, the Chinese: Background Language ATAR and the Chinese: First Language ATAR courses, refer to the course page on the Authority website at www.scsa.wa.edu.au

Application for enrolment in a language course

All students wishing to study a Western Australian Certificate of Education (WACE) language course are required to complete an application for permission to enrol in a WACE language course in the year prior to first enrolment in the course.

Information about the process, including an application form, is sent to schools at the end of Term 2.

Course outcomes

The Chinese: Second Language General course is designed to facilitate achievement of the following outcomes.

Outcome 1 – Listening and responding

Students listen and respond to a range of texts.

In achieving this outcome, students:

- use understandings of language, structure and context when listening and responding to texts
- use processes and strategies to make meaning when listening.

Outcome 2 – Spoken interaction

Students communicate in Chinese through spoken interaction.

In achieving this outcome, students:

- use understandings of language and structure in spoken interactions
- interact for a range of purposes in a variety of contexts
- use processes and strategies to enhance spoken interaction.

Outcome 3 – Viewing, reading and responding

Students view, read and respond to a range of texts.

In achieving this outcome, students:

- use understandings of language, structure and context to respond to texts
- use processes and strategies to make meaning when viewing and reading.

Outcome 4 – Writing

Students write a variety of texts in Chinese.

In achieving this outcome, students:

- use understandings of language and structure when writing
- write for a range of purposes and in a variety of contexts
- use processes and strategies to enhance writing.

Organisation

This course is organised into a Year 11 syllabus and a Year 12 syllabus. The cognitive complexity of the syllabus content increases from Year 11 to Year 12.

Structure of the syllabus

The Year 12 syllabus is divided into two units which are delivered as a pair. The notional time for the pair of units is 110 class contact hours.

Unit 3

This unit focuses on 我们的世界! (My world, your world!). Through the three topics: My neighbourhood, Celebrations, and Let's celebrate!, students continue to develop communication skills in Chinese and gain further insight into the language and culture.

Unit 4

This unit focuses on 我们去旅行吧! (Travel – let's go!). Through the three topics: Destination China, Welcome to Australia, and Travel in a modern world, students continue to develop communication skills in Chinese and gain further insight into the language and culture.

Each unit includes:

- a unit description – a short description of the focus of the unit
- unit content – the content to be taught and learned.

Organisation of content

The course content is organised into five content areas:

- Learning contexts and topics
- Text types and textual conventions
- Linguistic resources
- Intercultural understandings
- Language learning and communication strategies.

These content areas should not be considered in isolation, but rather holistically as content areas that complement one another, and that are interrelated and interdependent.

Learning contexts and topics

Each unit is defined with a particular focus, three learning contexts and a set of topics.

The learning contexts are:

- The individual
- The Chinese-speaking communities
- The changing world.

Each learning context has a set of topics that promote meaningful communication and enable students to extend their understanding of the Chinese language and culture. The placement of topics under one or more of the three learning contexts is intended to provide a particular perspective, or perspectives, on each of the topics.

Text types and textual conventions

Text types are categories of print, spoken, visual, or audiovisual text, identified in terms of purpose, audience and features.

In learning a language, it is necessary to engage with, and produce, a wide variety of text types. Text types and textual conventions vary across languages and cultures and provide information about the society and culture in which they are produced. Students are encouraged to listen to, read and view a range of texts, and be provided with opportunities to practise them.

Textual conventions are the features, patterns and rules of texts, which are determined by the text type, context, audience and purpose of the text. They also include protocols for participating in communication, such as ways of initiating conversations, framing requests, disagreeing, and responding. Students should be made aware of the defining characteristics of different texts.

In school-based assessments, and the WACE externally set task, students are expected to respond to, and to produce, a range of spoken and written text types in Chinese. Text types for assessment are outlined in each unit, and textual conventions are defined in Appendix 2.

Linguistic resources

Linguistic resources are the specific elements of language that are necessary for communication. Acquiring linguistic resources allows for the development of knowledge, skills and understandings relevant to the vocabulary, grammar and sound (Pinyin) and writing (characters) systems of Chinese.

As well as enabling communication, developing understanding of the linguistic resources also enhances intercultural understandings, literacy skills and awareness of one's own language.

Intercultural understandings

Intercultural understandings involve developing knowledge, awareness and understanding of one's own culture(s) and language(s), as well as that of the Chinese-speaking world. The study of the learning contexts and topics, text types and textual conventions and linguistic resources, will enable the development of intercultural understandings which enhances the ability to communicate, interact and negotiate within and across languages and cultures, and to understand oneself and others.

The development of intercultural competence can be described as moving from a stage, where students are not aware of, or do not understand or practise cultural norms, to where cultural practices are so internalised that the student no longer notices them. It is not expected that second language learners will develop this degree of cultural competence without spending considerable time in-country. It is, however, expected that students will develop cultural self-awareness and become aware of cultural issues which govern speech and behaviour in Chinese-speaking communities, and begin to apply these in order to communicate effectively.

Language learning and communication strategies

Language learning and communication strategies are processes, techniques and skills relevant to:

- supporting learning and the acquisition of language
- making meaning from texts
- producing texts
- engaging in spoken interaction.

These strategies support and enhance the development of literacy skills and enable the further development of cognitive skills through thinking critically and analytically, solving problems, and making connections. Students should be taught these strategies explicitly and provided with opportunities to practise them.

Representation of the general capabilities

The general capabilities encompass the knowledge, skills, behaviours and dispositions that will assist students to live and work successfully in the twenty-first century. Teachers may find opportunities to incorporate the capabilities into the teaching and learning program for the Chinese: Second Language General course. The general capabilities are not assessed unless they are identified within the specified unit content.

Literacy

For language learners, literacy involves skills and knowledge that need guidance, time and support to develop. These skills include:

- developing an ability to decode and encode from sound to written systems
- mastering of grammatical, orthographic, and textual conventions
- developing semantic, pragmatic, and critical literacy skills.

For learners of Chinese, literacy development in the language also extends literacy development in their first language and English.

Numeracy

Learning languages affords opportunities for learners to develop, use and understand, patterns, order and relationships, to reinforce concepts, such as number, time, and space, in their own and in different cultural and linguistic systems.

Information and communication technology capability

Information and communication technology (ICT) extends the boundaries of the classroom and provides opportunities to develop information technology capabilities as well as linguistic and cultural knowledge.

Critical and creative thinking

As students learn to interact with people from diverse backgrounds and as they explore and reflect critically, they learn to notice, connect, compare, and analyse aspects of the Chinese language and culture. As a result, they develop critical thinking skills as well as analytical and problem-solving skills.

Personal and social capability

Learning to interact in a collaborative and respectful manner is a key element of personal and social competence. Recognising that people view and experience the world in different ways is an essential aspect of learning another language.

Ethical understanding

In learning a language, students learn to acknowledge and value difference in their interactions with others and to develop respect for diverse ways of perceiving the world.

Intercultural understanding

Learning a language involves working with, and moving between, languages and cultures. This movement between languages and cultures is what makes the experience intercultural. Intercultural understandings is one of the five content areas of the course.

Representation of the cross-curriculum priorities

The cross-curriculum priorities address the contemporary issues which students face in a globalised world. Teachers may find opportunities to incorporate the priorities into the teaching and learning program for the Chinese: Second Language General course. The cross-curriculum priorities are not assessed unless they are identified within the specified unit content.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander histories and cultures

Learning Chinese provides opportunities to develop an understanding of concepts related to language and culture in general and make intercultural comparisons across languages, including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages.

Asia and Australia's engagement with Asia

In learning Chinese, students develop capabilities to engage with the language and cultures of Chinese-speaking communities, and of people of Chinese heritage within Australia, and other Chinese communities in the world.

Sustainability

In learning Chinese, students may engage with a range of texts and concepts related to sustainability, such as:

- the environment
- conservation
- social and political change
- how language and culture evolve.

Unit 3

Unit description

The focus for this unit is 我们的世界 (My world, your world!). Students continue to develop skills, knowledge and understandings through the study of the unit content. They extend their communication skills in Chinese and gain further insight into the culture.

Unit content

An understanding of the Year 11 content is assumed knowledge for students in Year 12. It is recommended that students studying Unit 3 and Unit 4 have completed Unit 1 and Unit 2.

This unit includes the knowledge, understandings and skills described below.

Learning contexts and topics

Unit 3 is organised around three learning contexts and a set of three topics. The placement of topics under a particular learning context is intended to provide a specific perspective for the teaching and assessment of the topic.

Learning contexts	Topics
The individual Students explore aspects of their personal world, aspirations, values, opinions, ideas, and relationships with others. They also study topics from the perspectives of other people.	My neighbourhood Students discuss their local neighbourhood and describe places and events.
The Chinese-speaking communities Students explore topics from the perspectives of individuals and groups within those communities, or the communities as a whole, and develop an understanding of how culture and identity are expressed through language.	Celebrations Students discuss and describe community events and celebrations in a Chinese-speaking community.
The changing world Students explore information and communication technologies and the effects of change and current issues in the global community.	Let's celebrate! Students describe world events or celebrations that interest them.

It is necessary for students to engage with a range of text types. In school-based assessments and the WACE externally set task, students are expected to respond to, and to produce, a range of text types in Chinese from the list below.

Refer to Appendix 2 for details on the features and conventions of the text types.

Linguistic resources

Vocabulary

Vocabulary phrases and expressions associated with the unit content.

Grammar

Students will be expected to recognise and use the following grammatical items:

Grammatical items	Sub-elements
Adverbs	都, 就, 已经, 比较
Aspects	durative – progressive 正在 experiential 过
Comparison	跟, 最
Constructions	因为…所以, 不但…而且, 虽然…但是/可是, 又…又
Prepositions	跟, 比, 给

Refer to Appendix 3 for elaborations of grammatical items.

Sound and writing systems

Development and consolidation of sound and writing systems of Chinese.

Intercultural understandings

The learning contexts and topics, the textual conventions of the text types selected, and the linguistic resources for the unit, should provide students with opportunities to enhance understanding of their own language(s) and culture(s) in relation to the Chinese language and culture, and enable them to reflect on the ways in which culture influences communication.

Language learning and communication strategies

Language learning and communication strategies will depend upon the needs of the students and the learning experiences and/or communication activities taking place.

Dictionaries

Students should be encouraged to use dictionaries and develop the necessary skills and confidence to do so effectively.

Unit 4

Unit description

The focus for this unit is 我们去旅行吧! (Travel – let's go!). Students continue to develop skills, knowledge and understandings through the study of the unit content. They extend their communication skills in Chinese and gain further insight into the culture.

Unit content

This unit builds on the content covered in Unit 3.

This unit includes the knowledge, understandings and skills described below.

Learning contexts

Unit 4 is organised around three learning contexts and a set of three topics. The placement of a topic under a particular learning context is intended to provide a specific perspective for the teaching and assessment of the topic.

Learning contexts	Topics
The individual Students explore aspects of their personal world, aspirations, values, opinions, ideas, and relationships with others. They also study topics from the perspectives of other people.	Destination China Students reflect on their own travel experiences and discuss and plan a trip to China.
The Chinese-speaking communities Students explore topics from the perspectives of individuals and groups within those communities, or the communities as a whole, and develop an understanding of how culture and identity are expressed through language.	Welcome to Australia Students discuss how they would prepare a Chinese-speaking student for travel, work and/or study in Australia.
The changing world Students explore information and communication technologies and the effects of change and current issues in the global community.	Travel in a modern world Students consider how technology is changing world travel, influencing how people plan their holidays and communicate while they are away.

It is necessary for students to engage with a range of text types. In school-based assessments and the WACE externally set task, students are expected to respond to, and to produce, a range of text types in Chinese from the list below.

Linguistic resources

Vocabulary

Vocabulary phrases and expressions associated with the unit content.

Grammar

Students will be expected to recognise and use the following grammatical items:

Grammatical items	Sub-elements
Adverbs	才, 再, 还
Conjunctions	或者, 然后
Constructions	要是...就...
Measure words	verbs 次, 遍
Nouns	以前, 以后, 以上, 以下
Particles	structural 的, 得, 地
Prepositions	从, 离
Sentence types	passive 被
Verbs and verb phrases	resultative 看见, 听清楚, 找到 verb 打算 auxiliary 应该, 得
Word for approximation	多

Refer to Appendix 3 for elaborations of grammatical items.

Sound and writing systems

Development and consolidation of sound and writing systems of Chinese.

Intercultural understandings

The learning contexts and topics, the textual conventions of the text types selected, and the linguistic resources for the unit, should provide students with opportunities to enhance understanding of their own language(s) and culture(s) in relation to the Chinese language and culture, and enable them to reflect on the ways in which culture influences communication.

Language learning and communication strategies

Language learning and communication strategies will depend upon the needs of the students and the learning experiences and/or communication activities taking place.

Dictionaries

Students should be encouraged to use dictionaries and develop the necessary skills and confidence to do so effectively.

School-based assessment

The Western Australian Certificate of Education (WACE) Manual contains essential information on principles, policies and procedures for school-based assessment that needs to be read in conjunction with this syllabus.

Teachers design school-based assessment tasks to meet the needs of students. The table below provides details of the assessment types for the Chinese: Second Language General Year 12 syllabus and the weighting for each assessment type.

Assessment table – Year 12

Type of assessment	Weighting
Oral communication Interaction with others to exchange information, ideas, opinions and experiences in spoken Chinese. This can involve participating in a role-play, an interview or a conversation.	30%
Response: Listening Comprehension and interpretation of, and response in English to, a range of Chinese spoken texts, such as messages, announcements, conversations and interviews.	20%
Response: Viewing and reading Comprehension and interpretation of, and response in English to, a range of Chinese print and audiovisual texts, such as emails, blog postings, films/television programs (excerpts), advertisements, reviews and articles.	25%
Written communication Production of written texts to express ideas and/or information and/or opinions in Chinese. This can involve responding to a stimulus, such as a blog posting, an email, an advertisement or an image, or writing a text, such as a journal/diary entry, a message, an account, a review, or an email.	10%
Externally set task A written task or item or set of items of 50 minutes duration developed by the School Curriculum and Standards Authority and administered by the school.	15%

Teachers are required to use the assessment table to develop an assessment outline for the pair of units.

The assessment outline must:

- include a set of assessment tasks
- include a general description of each task
- indicate the unit content to be assessed
- indicate a weighting for each task and each assessment type
- include the approximate timing of each task (for example, the week the task is conducted, or the issue and submission dates for an extended task).

All assessment types must be included in the assessment outline at least twice with the exception of the externally set task which only occurs once.

The set of assessment tasks must provide a representative sampling of the content for Unit 3 and Unit 4.

Assessment tasks not administered under test/controlled conditions require appropriate validation/authentication processes.

Externally set task

All students enrolled in the Year 12 Chinese: Second Language General course will complete the externally set task developed by the Authority. Schools are required to administer this task in Term 2 at a time prescribed by the Authority.

Externally set task design brief – Year 12

Time	50 minutes
Use of dictionaries	Special items: one combined print dictionary (Chinese/English and English/Chinese dictionary) or two separate print dictionaries (one English/Chinese dictionary and one Chinese/English dictionary) Note: Dictionaries must not contain any notes or other marks. No electronic dictionaries are allowed.
Format	Written
	Conducted under invigilated conditions
	Two parts based on 1–2 topics, and related learning contexts, from Unit 3
	Part 1: Response: Viewing and reading One text in Chinese with 2–5 questions in English with responses in English
	Part 2: Written communication One question in English requiring a written response in Chinese of 80–100 characters
Content	The Authority informs schools during Term 3 of the previous year of the Unit 3 syllabus content on which the task will be based

Refer to the WACE Manual for further information.

Grading

Schools report student achievement in terms of the following grades:

Grade	Interpretation
A	Excellent achievement
B	High achievement
C	Satisfactory achievement
D	Limited achievement
E	Very low achievement

The teacher prepares a ranked list and assigns the student a grade for the pair of units. The grade is based on the student's overall performance as judged by reference to a set of pre-determined standards. These standards are defined by grade descriptions and annotated work samples. The grade descriptions for the Chinese: Second Language General Year 12 syllabus are provided in Appendix 1. They can also be accessed, together with annotated work samples, through the Guide to Grades link on the course page of the Authority website at www.scsa.wa.edu.au.

To be assigned a grade, a student must have had the opportunity to complete the education program, including the assessment program (unless the school accepts that there are exceptional and justifiable circumstances).

Refer to the WACE Manual for further information about the use of a ranked list in the process of assigning grades.

Appendix 1 – Grade descriptions Year 12

A	Written production Competently conveys information and expresses ideas and opinions across a range of topics. Includes elaborations or examples to engage an audience. Provides relevant cultural references where required. Includes a range of vocabulary and sentence structures. Applies rules of grammar, but occasionally makes minor errors in syntax and vocabulary. Errors do not affect meaning. Writing is cohesive and well-structured, showing clear development and connection of ideas. Observes all the conventions of text types.
	Oral production Communicates effectively across a range of topics. Comprehends almost all questions without clarification. Responds in depth with relevant information and opinions. Responses are clear and cohesive. Uses a range of vocabulary and complex sentence structures. Errors do not affect meaning. Pronunciation is mostly accurate.
	Comprehension Accurately identifies, and extracts and processes information from a variety of texts across a range of topics. Conveys relevant details in a concise and cohesive manner. When processing less familiar language and more complex texts, responses are not always correct.
B	Written production Conveys information and expresses ideas and opinions across a range of topics. Provides some elaborations and relevant cultural references where required. Includes a range of familiar vocabulary, sentence structures and a variety of tenses. English influence on word order and punctuation is sometimes apparent. Errors do not affect meaning. Organises writing logically; develops ideas clearly. Observes most of the conventions of text types.
	Oral production Communicates effectively, in most instances, across a range of topics. Comprehends most questions and responds with relevant information, opinions and some detail. Responses are mostly clear and cohesive. Competently uses a range of vocabulary and simple sentence structures. Includes some complex sentences with errors. Pronunciation is reasonably accurate.
	Comprehension Identifies, and extracts and processes information from a variety of texts across a range of topics. Provides mostly accurate responses to literal questions, and some correct responses to inferential questions. May select the wrong word or phrase when consulting the dictionary, resulting in an inappropriate translation or interpretation.

C	Written production Expresses basic information and simple, personal ideas and opinions, related to familiar topics. May show some development of ideas or elaboration. Makes limited cultural references. Writing relies on familiar vocabulary, characters and sentence structures. Applies the rules of grammar, including word order, inconsistently. Writing is characterised by short, simple sentences. Observes some of the conventions of text types.
	Oral production Communicates some information and ideas, but provides little depth. Comprehends familiar questions, although rephrasing and support from the other speaker is sometimes necessary for complex questions. Provides brief responses that are reasonably accurate and that rely on well-rehearsed language. Uses a limited range of vocabulary and displays inaccuracies in grammar and word order. Pronunciation errors at times affect meaning.
	Comprehension Identifies, and extracts and processes some information from a variety of texts, but supporting details are not always provided. Responses to literal questions are mostly correct, but responses to inferential questions are frequently incorrect or incomplete. Occasionally selects the wrong word or phrases when consulting a dictionary.
D	Written production Expresses basic information and simple, personal ideas when writing about familiar topics. When writing about less familiar topics, may include irrelevant content. Uses well-rehearsed, simple language and short sentences. Writing is frequently repetitive, disjointed and influenced by first language. Displays inaccuracies in character formation. Inaccurately applies the basic rules of grammar. Inconsistently applies the conventions of text types.
	Oral production Communicates by providing some basic information and ideas. Requires frequent support from the other speaker to sustain conversation. Communication is hindered by a lack of comprehension. Uses a limited range of vocabulary that displays inaccuracies in grammar, word order and sentence structure. Responses are brief and are characterised by single words and fragmented sentences, or English. Pronunciation errors often affect meaning.
	Comprehension Identifies, and extracts limited information from texts. Responses are sometimes incomplete or irrelevant.
E	Does not meet the requirements of a D grade.

Appendix 2 – Text type list

This list is provided to enable a common understanding of the text types listed in the syllabus. Specific conventions required when writing in Chinese have been provided for some text types.

Account

In both spoken and written form, accounts retell something that happened: a story. Accounts have a title and are often in the first person. They describe a series of events or experiences, are often presented in a logical manner and at the conclusion there may be a resolution. Language is either formal or informal, with time words used to connect ideas, and action words used to describe events.

In Chinese, the title/heading of written accounts is centred and each paragraph is indented.

Advertisement

Advertisements promote a product or service. Emotive, factual or persuasive language is used in an informal or colloquial register. They often use abbreviated words and sentences, comparatives and superlatives, and may be in spoken, written or graphic form.

Announcement

In both spoken and written form, announcements present factual information about an event that has recently occurred or is about to occur. They may also be in graphic form. Announcements can sometimes use a formal register, but may also be in informal or colloquial register. They include factual, straightforward language with little elaboration, and present information in a logical sequence.

Article

Articles consist of a section of text from a newspaper, a magazine, a web page, or other publication. Typically, articles have a title that indicates the content. They are usually in a formal register and the language in an article can be descriptive, factual, judgemental, emotive or persuasive, depending on the context. Within an article, ideas or opinions are developed. Articles often end with a statement of conclusion or advice to the reader. They may be accompanied by a graphic, if necessary. Articles can be reproduced directly, or can be modified to make the language more accessible for students.

In Chinese, the title/heading of an article is centred and each paragraph is indented. Articles typically follow the structure: introduction, body and conclusion.

Blog posting

Web logs (blogs) are basically journals that are available on the World Wide Web. Many blogs provide commentary or news on a particular subject; others function as more personal online diaries. Typically, blogs combine text, images, and link to other blogs, web pages, and other media related to their topic. Students will generally be required to write a response to a blog (a posting). Postings can sometimes use a formal register, but may also be in informal or colloquial register. The language in a blog posting can be descriptive, factual, judgemental, emotive or persuasive, depending on the context.

Cartoon

Cartoons or comic strips represent a drawing or sequence of drawings arranged in panels to display brief humour, or form a narrative, with text in balloons and captions. The language in a cartoon or comic strip can be subjective or objective, descriptive, factual, judgemental, humorous, emotive or persuasive, depending on the context, and may involve a range of tenses. A cartoon or comic strip may illustrate or describe an event, or series of events, often presented in a logical sequence, and at the conclusion there may be a resolution.

Chart

Charts organise and represent a set of data in a diagram or table. They may also visually represent knowledge, concepts, thoughts, or ideas. They are typically graphical and contain very little text. Charts include a title that provides a succinct description of what the data in the chart refers to, and contain key words that readers are looking for. They are usually in a formal register.

Conversation

In both spoken and written form, conversations often begin with an exchange of opening salutations, are followed by a question or statement, and then a two-way sustained interaction. The language is often authentic, informal and conversational in style, sometimes with interjections, incomplete sentences, and pauses and fillers. The register of conversations will often depend on the context and relationship between participants.

Description

Descriptions of people, places, animals, events or feelings, or a combination of these, can often be found within another context (letter, article etc.). Information can be presented in an objective or subjective way. Details are presented to create a clear image for the reader. Extravagant language or superlatives may be used to emphasise an impression, atmosphere or mood. Descriptions may contain references to sight, sound, smell, touch, taste or feelings.

Diary entry

Diary entries record personal reflections, comments, information or experiences of the writer. The language of diary entries should generally be informal and colloquial and entries are often written in the first person. Entries use subjective language to give a clear sense of the writer's personality, and to explain their feelings and emotions. The layout should appear authentic, provide a sense of time and sequence, and possibly a place name.

In Chinese, diary entries typically start with the date, followed by weather of the day. Each new paragraph should be indented.

Email

The language of email messages could be formal or informal, depending on the context. A message from one friend to another should be colloquial. A message that is business-related should use a more formal register. Although authentic emails often do not have either a salutation at the beginning, or a signature at the end, they should have both in assessment usage in order to indicate more clearly the context of the message.

In Chinese, emails start with the name of the recipient, followed by a colon. Each new paragraph is indented. The email ends with a salutation, followed by the name of the writer, both of these are aligned to the left. A date is typically not included in an email as this is automatically generated by the email.

Film or TV program (excerpts)

Excerpts are segments taken from a longer work of a television program or a film. They are often used to illustrate and strengthen understanding of a topic, provide a description of characters and settings, or present a series of events in a logical progression. Depending on the context, excerpts may be either in formal or informal register, present a range of tenses, or contain language that can be subjective or objective, descriptive, factual, judgemental, humorous, emotive, or persuasive.

Form

Forms contain a series of questions asked of individuals to obtain information about a given position, focus or topic etc. In their design, they have a title, contact details and questions. Forms may include categories. The language of forms is often objective and includes descriptive words, a range of tenses, and a variety of questions to address. As a response, students could be asked to complete a form or respond to questions or criteria in an application, for example, for a job.

Image

Images can frequently be used on their own as they communicate ideas in much more complete and complex ways than words alone. At other times, they are included with a title or caption or other text as a stimulus for response. Images should always complement and provide information on the topic or text.

Interview

In both spoken or written form, interviews often begin with an exchange of opening salutations, are followed by a question or statement, and then a two-way sustained interaction. The language is often authentic, informal and conversational in style, sometimes with interjections, incomplete sentences, and pauses and fillers. The register of interviews will often depend on the context and relationship between participants.

Itinerary

Itineraries provide a plan for a journey. They present specific details and factual information about destinations, transportation methods, accommodation, list of the “to-dos”, attractions and events. Itineraries also include names, addresses and any other contact information necessary while on the journey. Depending on the context, itineraries may be either in formal or informal register, and present a range of tenses.

Journal entry

Journal entries record personal reflections, comments, information, or experiences of the writer. The language of journal entries should generally be informal and colloquial, and entries are often written in the first person. Entries use subjective language to give a clear sense of the writer’s personality, and to explain their feelings and emotions. The layout should appear authentic, provide a sense of time and sequence, and possibly a place name.

Letter

Formal letters are written communication in formal contexts, to convey/request information, to lodge a complaint, or to express an opinion. The layout of a formal letter must include the date, the address of sender and recipient, and a formal greeting and phrase of farewell. The language should be in formal register and deal with a business or other specific topic. Common features of a formal letter are the use of objective language, full sentences and paragraphs, frequent use of formulaic language, and a logical and cohesive sequence of ideas.

Informal letters are written communication with acquaintances, friends and family, to inform or to amuse. The layout of an informal letter can be less stylised than a formal letter; possibly with only the date, the address of the sender, a casual greeting and a phrase of farewell. The language can be informal and colloquial and the content can be simple and casual. Common features of an informal letter are the use of subjective language, sentence structure often less complex than in formal letters, and a logical and cohesive sequence of ideas.

In Chinese, informal letters start with the name of the recipient followed by a colon. The first paragraph starts with a salutation of some kind. Each paragraph is indented. The letter ends with a closing remark. The writer's name is included below the last paragraph and is right aligned. The date appears below the name of the writer (also right aligned).

Map

Maps are a form of symbolisation, governed by a set of conventions, that aim to instruct, inform or communicate a sense of place. Maps are usually in a formal register and frequently use formulaic expressions. They should have a title, orientation, scale, longitude and latitude, an index grid and a symbols translator. They can be reproduced directly or can be modified to make the language more accessible for students.

Message

In both spoken and written form, messages are objects of communication that inform, request, instruct or remind. The written forms are less formal than informal letters and are often used to convey information left on an answering machine, on a mobile phone, or in a telephone call. They have a salutation and a signing off, but the content should be brief and to the point, and convey a specific piece of information with little extra detail.

Note

Notes are written to inform, request, instruct or remind. They are less formal than informal letters. Notes have a salutation and a signing off, but the content should be brief and to the point, and convey a specific piece of information with little extra detail.

In Chinese, notes typically start with the name of the recipient followed by a colon. The name of the writer appears below the message and is right aligned. The date or time is on the next line and is also right aligned.

Review

Reviews are evaluations of publications, such as films, songs, musical performances, novels or stories. The plot summary and description of the work or performance form the majority of the review. The language and structure are formal; however, more personal and evaluative comments are often included.

A title should be given.

Role-play

In both spoken and written form, role-plays are used to communicate and exchange ideas, information, opinions, and experiences. Role-plays would generally have only two speakers, but each speaker must be clearly identified.

A role-play often begins with an exchange of opening salutations, is followed by a question or statement, and then a two-way sustained interaction. The language is often authentic, informal and conversational in style, sometimes with interjections, incomplete sentences, and pauses and fillers to maintain the conversation. The language level of role-plays will often depend on the context and relationship between participants.

Script – speech, interview, dialogue

Scripts are written forms of speeches, interviews or dialogues that communicate and exchange ideas, information, opinions and experiences. Scripts would generally have only two speakers, possibly an interviewer and an interviewee, but each speaker must be clearly identified. A script often begins with an exchange of opening salutations, is followed by a question or statement, and then a two-way sustained interaction. The language is often authentic, informal and conversational in style, sometimes with interjections, incomplete sentences, and pauses and fillers to maintain the conversation. The language level of scripts will often depend on the context and relationship between participants.

In Chinese, scripts for speeches will typically start with a salutation. Paragraphs are indented and the first will include a reference to the target audience and purpose of the speech. Following the concluding paragraph there is a closing remark. The name of the speaker is at the end (right aligned) with his/her role below.

Sign

Signs convey a meaning. They present factual information about an object, a situation that exists, or an event that is about to occur. Signs use a formal register and are most often in graphic form.

Table

Tables organise and represent a set of data in a diagram or table. They may also visually represent knowledge, concepts, thoughts, or ideas. Tables are typically graphical and contain very little text. However, they do include a title that provides a succinct description of what the data in the chart or table refers to. They are usually in a formal register.

Appendix 3 – Elaborations of grammatical items
